

High intensity discharge headlights are a significant improvement in nighttime visibility. If anything, headlights are still not bright enough. HID lights, aimed properly, certainly cause no more "glare" than ordinary headlights do as I drive towards them at night. European drivers don't have problems with HID lights. Please ignore the complainers and do not ban safe, bright, innovative lighting systems.